Ross' practical experience across both law and surveying gives him an unparalleled understanding of the rural sector.

Being dual qualified as a chartered surveyor and former solicitor is unique within the Scottish jurisdiction. This depth of applied knowledge provides Ross with an exceptional understanding of the transactional process from initial valuation right through to handing over the keys.

Ross is responsible for Bidwells' Scottish valuation and agency services, which encompass the full spectrum of rural property types, from diversified and multifaceted estates and commercial agricultural businesses, right through to individual cottages.

Ross' core focus is the valuation, sale and purchase of estates, farms, equine and rural residential properties, as well as rural development opportunities and commercial prospects. Ross' clients appreciate his steadying hand during what can sometimes be quite complex and demanding transactions.

Ross is acutely aware that to get the best results, he must understand what motivates each individual. Unlocking doors, both physical and aspirational, is what Ross does best. His significant technical and transactional know-how, coupled with a genuine passion for property and people, is key to his success.
